Man: And what about the interest rate?

Woman: It is low, but you can check your bank statement online every month.

Woman: No, just myself. How much do I need to open the account?

Woman: Can I pay by credit card, or transfer money from my account in China?

Man: Yes, a money transfer is fine, and we also accept cash and traveller's cheques.

Woman: Do you offer a Master Card or a Visa Card with the account?

Man: Both are available, and you can choose your <sup>2</sup>_____ card when you complete the form.

Woman: And is there an overdraft facility?

Man: Yes, but you must apply for it, and the bank will charge <sup>3</sup>_____ if you use it.

Man: Monthly, please. And do you provide life insurance with the account?

Woman: We offer house insurance and travel insurance as optional services, but they cost extra.

Man: Fine. Can I open the account today, and how long will it take?

Woman: About twenty minutes, and you can withdraw cash from the counter immediately after you <sup>4</sup>_____.

Let me answer a few more questions about the accounts. A current account is for everyday spending, and a deposit account is for saving money.

You can use the ATM to withdraw cash, and you will receive a bank statement every month.

If you and your partner open a joint account, both of you can use it, but each person needs a separate PIN.

You can pay by credit card, and most shops accept a Master Card or a Visa Card.

Please be careful not to overspend; if you do, the bank may allow an overdraft, but the interest rate is high.

For travel, a traveller's cheque is safer than cash, and you can exchange money at the bank or the airport.
